Juniper Bushes at Reynold's Bridge. Juniper bushes are quite rare about this section, but on the extreme top of Pine Hill, Reynold's Bridge, are a few specimens. The plants spread amazingly from one root, one being 20 feet across the top and not more than 30 inches in height. Just now herries are forming. As the shoots spring up, they drop to the ground where often they take root. The plant belongs to the red codar family and is a beautiful specimen of its kind.

So much of this good news came in over Sunday, May 11th, 1862, that The out. Builetin got out a special war extra for that day, considering that it could hardly refrain from publishing such in-

Patriotism and Religion. The following are extracts from the files of The Bulletin fifty years ago:
May 12, 1882—The news received on Sunday of the capture of Norfolk, the destruction of the Merrimac, the continued pursuit of the rebels, their first overals Richards and their north of the city. Mr. Henr. flight towards Richmond and their uttor demoralisation, the reported eva-cuation of Fort Wright, the encourag-ing state of affairs in Corinth and at Memphis, and all the good news we publish morning as condensed from our extra of Sunday, was too much for one or two patriots to hold. So being flooded with inquiries about the news on Sunday, and knowing that we had just such news as ought to gladden the heart of every truth-loving, gospel supporting and church-going man and supporting and church-going man and woman in the community, we concluded to do just as we had in two instances before—issue an extra containing the whole of it on Sunday afternoon. We did so. We do not believe any truly religious man in the town for we believe patriotism to be one of the first principles, one of the cardinal elements of religion—objects to our having done so. We have heard
